

KRYL'S BAND TO PLAY IN DIXON ON REGISTER DAY

FAMOUS ORGANIZATION TO GIVE
TWO CONCERTS HERE
JUNE 5TH.

AUSPICES DIXON LODGE B.P.O.E.

Concerts Will Be Played At the Rock
River Assembly Park Auditorium.

An announcement of more than ordinary interest to lovers of music was made this morning by Charles E. Miller, chairman of the House committee of Dixon Lodge B. P. O. Elks, to the effect that Bohumir Kryl and his famous band had been contracted to appear here in two concerts Tuesday, June 5, under the auspices of the lodge.

The concerts—at 2:30 and 8 p. m.—will be given in the Auditorium at Assembly park, and the affair will be advertised for miles around, for with good weather it is estimated the affair can be made a rival of the famous concert by the U. S. Marine band here a few years ago.

The concerts will be of especial moment here also, for they come on registration day—one of the Red Letter days of American history—and Kryl has written that he is preparing a program of the best patriotic music interpolated with standard popular and classic numbers. The concert programs will be such as will appeal to all lovers of music, not only to the more finished musicians.

Dixon was able to secure this great attraction only through one fortunate circumstance—that the band had an open date on its tour from the east to the larger cities of the middle west—Omaha, Des Moines, Kansas City, Minneapolis, etc. The organization is one of the best and most widely known in the world, and with favorable weather it is assured that Tuesday, June 5, will be a big day in Dixon.

Will Tell of War.
Mr. Miller also made announcement of another event of interest to members of the Elks and their families next Tuesday evening—a lecture on "The War Today," by S. J. Duncan Clark, military expert of the Chicago Evening Post which address will follow a 6:30 supper for members of the lodge and their families.

Mr. Clark has, since the outbreak of the war, written a two column article each day for the Chicago Evening Post and his grasp of the subject and analysis of the movements of the various armies on the eastern and western fronts has been sustained many times by the occurrence of the events he predicted. He will have with him a number of war maps and will take up the positions of the various armies, Ententes and Teutonic, and explain what each command is endeavoring to achieve.

Dr. Claude Backus Writes Of Golf Course In India With Hindu Caddies

The American Golfer, the authoritative organ of the "Royal and Ancient Game," of which Walter Travis is editor, has in its May issue the following article by Dr. Claude Backus, formerly of this city, on Mahabeshwar. The article is profusely illustrated with views of the Indian golf course:

In knocking about the world a golf enthusiast invariably keeps an eye open for unique, "sporty" or unusually beautiful courses. At Honolulu are beautiful greens, both picturesque and worth playing; Manila boasts nothing unusual, while Neauralia, Ceylon, presents a beautiful turf course. Calcutta is above the average, Bombay poor, but at Poona one begins to prepare for the surprise of his golfing life, by playing among the hills over a granite course, with scant turf and thousands of boulders and natural hazards. The ball must be picked absolutely clean and runs interminable distances when this is accomplished. Putting is on "browns," i. e., sand evenly brushed over a hard baked brown clay. Here it was that the tales of the Mahabeshwar course in the mountain jungle came to my ear. "Have you played at Mahabeshwar? Then how many balls did you lose

FREIGHT WRECK DELAYS MAIL

Morning Mail Several Hours Late in Reaching Dixon Today.

The morning mail from the east and all merchandise from Chicago was several hours late reaching Dixon this morning because of a bad freight wreck on the Northwestern at Lombard at midnight, where a broken journal caused the wreckage of 16 laden box cars of an eastbound train. The wreck blocked both tracks and it was necessary to send No. 15, morning mail train, from Chicago to Crystal Lake on the Wisconsin division, and then to West Chicago. The train, which is due here before 5 o'clock, did not arrive until nearly 8.

RELIEF WORK UNDER WAY IN FIRE-SWEPT REGION OF ATLANTA

HELP 10,000 MADE HOMELESS
BY FIRE WHICH RAGED YESTERDAY.

BUT ONE LIFE WAS LOST

Injuries Were Few—Mayor Places
Loss At $3,000,000—Others
Estimate More.

(Associated Press)

Atlanta, Ga., May 22—Atlanta today went to work to care for the destitute people of the 3000 homes destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon and last night, which swept 75 blocks and caused a loss, according to Mayor Candler, of $3,000,000. Other estimates placed the loss as high as $5,000,000. One woman lost her life through shock, but the injuries were few.

10,000 were made homeless and 36 closely built blocks were reduced to ruins by the fire which swept first through the negro sections and then to the palatial residences in the fashionable Ponce de Leon section. Dynamite was resorted to time and again to check the path of the flames and not until late at night was the fire practically gotten under control.

Loss Put at $5,000,000.
National guardsmen from Camp McPherson are on guard in the whole fire-swept regions. Looters will be dealt with by firm hand. The loss is estimated by insurance men at $5,000,000.

Although there were scores of minor injuries, no one was fatally hurt as the result of the fires.

The fires started, or at least one of them, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. The fires were sweeping a block on East Fair street and in the west end. They were demanding the efforts of the city's entire apparatus. The third alarm came that a fire was raging in the block bounded by Decatur, Fort, Hilliard street and Edgewood avenue. It was impossible for the firemen in the other sections to reach the third fire in time to prevent its spreading.

Aid was summoned from other cities. In special trains and in fast automobiles, firemen from nearby cities came to help the Atlanta fighters. The flames, shooting skyward and

WILSON STILL FOR CENSOR

President Said to Be Urging Senate to Adopt House Bill.

Washington, May 22—President Wilson has not abandoned his fight for the censorship of the press.

It will be recalled that while the senate, by a large majority, eliminated the drastic censorship from the espionage bill, and declined to legislate on the subject at all, the house included a modified provision in the same measure. Now the President is endeavoring to have the senate accept the house provision.

The conference on the part of the senate all voted for the administration's censorship plan, far reaching as it was, and they are entirely willing to follow the President's desire and accept the house provision.

FEELING AGAINST GERMANY INCREASES

MEXICO, DENMARK AND BRAZIL
SHOWING SIGNS OF INDIGNATION.

(Associated Press)

Washington, May 22—A Berlin dispatch says the Mexican minister to Germany has handed a note to the German government protesting very strongly against the submarine campaign.

The tide of indignation against Germany is spreading in Scandinavia and Spain because of the submarine campaign continues to rise. Since the beginning of the war Denmark has lost 150 ships by submarines or mines, resulting in the death of 210 seamen.

Brazil May Help Us.

In a message to the Brazilian congress President Brazili has recommended the revocation of the decree of neutrality in the war between the U. S. and Germany and congress is expected to accept the recommendation. The United States will exercise no pressure to force Mexico to take sides in the war, according to a dispatch from Mexico City.

San Francisco, May 22—The 13th amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting involuntary servitude was invoked here today in the state supreme court to relieve Ferdinand Claudius of Oakland from military registration.

FIRST - IN DIXON.

Ralph William Losey, a traveling man from Dearborn, Mich., was the first to apply for registration in Lee county, appearing before County Clerk Dimick early this morning. At noon today three non-residents had received their instructions from Mr. Dimick.

There is but one answer to every question regarding registration for selective conscription June 5th, and it is:

Every man between the ages of 21 and 30 years, inclusive, whether he be native born, an alien, an even an alien enemy, must register June 5th. This applies also to invalids and persons who are ill. A man is 30 until he has passed his 31st birthday.

Have Discussed Questions.

Sheriff Phillips, County Clerk Dimick and County Physician Parker, who constitute Lee county's registration board, have held a number of conferences on the big task before them and when the registrars from the various precincts, a list of whom appears elsewhere in this issue, meet at the county court rooms at 1 p. m. tomorrow in compliance with orders issued this morning, they will be given full instructions concerning their work.

For Sick and Absent.

At present the regulations are most vital to men of the specific age who are sick or away from their home precinct. They must appear at County Clerk Dimick's office in person, or if sick and invalid, by agent, on or before Thursday of this week and receive registration blanks which must after being filled and sworn to, be sent by registered mail to the sheriff of the county in which they vote, or if that voting place be in a city of 30,000 or over, to the mayor of the city, who will see that it is transmitted to the registrar of the proper precinct on June 5.

The Man Out of Town.

On June 5 the man in town will go to his home precinct polling place, answer all questions on the printed card, and will be given a registration certificate, to demand to see which anyone has the right, which shows he has performed his duty. The certificate he will preserve. The card, bearing information about him, will be sent to the board of registration, and from there a duplicate will be sent to the Adjutant General for transmission to the proper authorities of the federal government.

The Man Out of Town.

If a resident of any precinct leaves that precinct after May 25 to remain until after June 5 it is his duty to first go to the office of County Clerk Dimick and there apply for a registration card. This card will then be turned over to the sheriff, who in turn will see that it reaches the proper registrar on June 5.

NAVY YOUTH TELLS OF THE FIRST SHOT

Gunner That Drew German Blood
Recounts Exploit.

SURE U BOAT WAS SUNK

Denies Berlin Report That Undersea Craft Returned, Damaged, to Home Port—His Gray Haired Father Present at Banquet Proud of His Naval Hero and Envied by Others.

A slender young man in the uniform of the United States navy stood before 150 cheering and proudly jubilant army and navy veterans at a New York hotel and told how he had fired the first shot for America in the war. He was Lieutenant Bruce R. Ware, Jr., who on April 19, the anniversary of the battle of Lexington, gave the command from the deck of the Mongolia that sent a six inch shell spinning through the periscope of a German U boat bent on the liner's destruction.

All evening Lieutenant Ware and Captain Emory Rice, commander of the Mongolia, had listened to words of praise from the other speakers, and the lieutenant was smiling when he arose, but his voice broke with emotion as he swept into his story, and at times he repeated his commands to his men as if he were still standing on the Mongolia's bridge with his eyes glued to his glasses.

Day and Night Watch Kept.

"It is a wonderful pleasure to tell you how I fired the first shot and drew the first blood," he said. "Captain Rice and I formulated a war doctrine, and one of the first things we did was to begin a night and day watch when we were six days from our destination. This event happened five and a half days later.

"We had been up continually, the men had all been at their guns, and we had not had our clothes off. Captain Rice and I were always on the bridge; there was a gunner's mate always ready and a telephone always at my elbow. We were always ready, and we were ready at 5:22 a. m. on the 19th of April."

The lieutenant was forced to halt for a moment, as the room rang with shouts as the guests rose to their feet and waved napkins and small American flags.

U Boat Sighted.

"The sun came up one minute before 5, and it began to get a little thick," he continued. "We were then off Beachy Head light, twenty miles from the Dover strait. Looking through the port, I saw the chief officer turn around. You could see the whole story in his face. He could hardly speak the words, 'My God,' he cried, 'look at it!' I said, 'It's a U boat, and he's got us.'"

"We threw in the starboard control. 'Zigzag,' I said to Captain Rice. I didn't tell him which way to go, because that had all been decided out. We charged. We made that snake that came creeping in toward us go down."

"I rushed to the chart house and telephoned: 'No. 3 gun train on the starboard quarter! Report when you see submarine.' The gun crew reported almost instantly, 'There it is.' Then, 'Now it's gone; there it is again.' I trained my glasses and picked it up."

Conning Tower Hit.

"I ordered No. 3 gun to commence firing. 'Fire! Fire! Fire!' And they did, and I picked up that six inch shell as she left the gun, and I saw it travel through the air, and I saw it strike eight inches, a foot, in front of that fellow's periscope."

And then, in contradiction of the German dispatch to the effect that the submarine was not sunk, but limped into a home port, badly crippled, Lieutenant Ware fairly shouted the words: "And it went into that conning tower! I saw the flakes of metal flying into the sea. I saw smoke. I hit the enemy!"

When the applause had subsided a gray haired, bespectacled and bearded man arose and asked if he might say a word.

"Sure!" came the answering chorus.

Ware Senior Proud of Son.
"You," he said, "have been proud of my son since April 19. I've been proud of him since Feb. 27, 1887."

And Bruce R. Ware, Sr., with moist eyes and flushed face, sat down again, amid the cheering of more than 100 fathers who envied him that proud moment of his life.

Captain Rice was called upon, but blushing excused himself.

"I'd rather take the Mongolia through the war zone any day than make a speech," he said. "All I can say is that I hope we meet that U boat again if she is still able to navigate."

Most of those present were old friends of Captain Rice when he sailed the Pacific steamship service between San Francisco and oriental ports.

SEES CHANGE FOR OTHERS

Alton, Ill., May 21—"Every time I breathed it felt like a knife was running through my back and the aches and pains that I suffered in my sides were unbearable at times; but now they have left me and I feel better than I have for years since taking Tanlac," Mrs. Charlotte Emerick, wife of a well known employee of the Federal Lead Co., who lives at 229 Hamilton street, this city, said on April 19.

"I was actually in such a condition that I could hardly do my work," Mrs. Emerick continued. "I had no appetite and felt tired, weak and worn out all the time. I was very restless and couldn't sleep at night and would get up in the mornings feeling as tired as when I went to bed. I couldn't lay on my back at night owing to the pains."

"I read in the newspapers about Tanlac's good work and finally decided to try the new medicine. Well sir, the severe pains have completely left my back and sides. I just want to eat all the time, now, it seems and sleep—well, I guess I'm making up for the time I've lost during these last few years. I can work the entire day without feeling tired and worn out at night."

Tanlac, the Master Medicine, is especially beneficial for stomach, liver and kidney trouble, loss of appetite, nervousness, catarrhal complaints and the like.

Tanlac is being introduced and explained in Dixon at Campbell & Sons Drug Store and in Franklin Grove at C. S. Ives Drug Store.

HELPING TO MOBILIZE THE MIND OF AMERICA

Chautauqua Associations Will Sow Seeds of Patriotism During the Summer.

While President Wilson and his associates are bending every effort to the mobilization of the physical resources of the nation for the prosecution of the war, an army of trained platformists in 5,000 Chautauqua tents and auditoriums will do their bit in mobilizing the mind of America.

Such is the declaration of the Chautauqua Managers' association, made up of managers in direct control of most of the Chautauquas in America, who have placed the services of their platforms unreservedly at the call of the government.

"An America of one mind regarding the war is invincible," says Dr. Paul M. Pearson, secretary of the Managers' association, "and there is no more effective way of reaching the people and effecting a solidarity of opinion than is offered by Chautauquas of America."

"In our audiences this summer will be gathered more than 5,000,000 representative Americans, the warp and woof of the body politic. What these men and women think about the war is all important. Their attitude toward it will mean a swift and terrible or a weak and halting America. To help them think right is the task of the Chautauqua. Every energy will be devoted to sounding a patriotic note."

"Chautauqua, which for forty years has labored for greater democracy in America, will in this international crisis do its duty in supporting the national program 'to make democracy safe in the world.'"

Among the representative men and women who will assist in creating sentiment in support of the president are Mrs. LaSalle Corbell Pickett, widow of General George E. Pickett; Hon. Francis Nelson, ex-member of British parliament; Dr. Lincoln Wirt, ex-Governor A. C. Shallenberger, Governor George A. Carlson, Colonel George W. Bain, Colonel John A. Patton and his Old Soldier Fiddlers, Frank Dixon, ex-President William H. Taft, Dr. Frank W. Gunsalus, Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, Hon. Elmer J. Birkett, ex-Governor M. R. Patterson, Dr. Russell H. CHIEF PROVISIONS OF THE CONSCRIPTION BILL

The war army bill's chief provisions are:

Raising of forces by the selective draft system, imposed upon all males between the ages of twenty-one and thirty years, both inclusive, subject to registration and certain exemptions from service.

Increasing the regular army to maximum war strength.

Drafting into the federal service of national guard units.

Raising of an initial force by conscription of 500,000 men, with addition of 500,000 if deemed necessary.

Raising, if the president sees fit, of four divisions of volunteer infantry. (The Roosevelt amendment.)

Increasing the pay of all enlisted men as follows: $15 additional monthly for those now receiving less than $21, comprising the bulk of the army, graduated downward to $6 additional monthly for those receiving $45 or more.

Prohibiting sale of liquor at or near army training camps and otherwise protecting morals of the soldier.

Arthur Mensch of Palmyra was in town Monday.

Lemons Whiten and Beautify the Skin! Make Cheap Lotion

The juice of two lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white makes a whole quart of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost of one cent. It is a small jar of the ordinary cold cream. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp get in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothen and beautifier.

Just try it. Make up a quart of this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion and massage it daily into the face, neck, arms and hands. It should materially help to whiten, soften, freshen, and bring out the hidden roses and beauty of any skin. It is wonderful for rough red hands.

Your druggist will sell three ounces of orchard white at little cost, and any grocer will supply the lemons.

If you feel that your telephone is costing enough now, be sure to come to public meeting at City Hall, Tuesday this week, 8 p. m.

Presbyterian Church Warming

Although a good many hesitated Monday evening to leave their own firesides for a house-warming elsewhere, those that did found the Presbyterian church a very pleasant place, very comfortable, and with that good, old-fashioned spirit of sociability and geniality providing an atmosphere which warmed the heart and left an after-glow of good feeling that will last long.

The gathering of Monday evening, known as the church-warming, was held in the church chapel which was sweet with the odor of purple and white lilacs, used in large vases as the decorations, and adding quite a May-day touch. A number of clever young musicians, including the Presbyterian members of the North Dixon school orchestra—Dorman and Charles Anderson, John Hoon, Ruth Morris—gave a delightful program of music. Katherine Durkes played two pretty piano numbers, little Miss Henrietta Vail played very ably, producing sweet music from her violin, and the adorable little Josephine Anderson sang a dear little song. Later every one made themselves agreeable to every one else and ice cream and little cakes were served.

The committee responsible for the happy evening was composed of Mrs. O. L. Baird, Mrs. John Laing, Mrs. C. D. Anderson, and Miss Agnes Raymond.

With Mrs. Wasley

The O. E. S. Parlor Club members again experienced the delightful hospitality of the John Wasley when they met with Mrs. Wasley home Monday afternoon. Fancy-work occupied the fingers of the members as they chatted of current happenings, and among the many pretty crochet patterns there was none prettier than that for a bed spread which Mrs. Wasley had made. Mrs. Adolph Eichler, during the afternoon, favored the company with three clever readings and Mrs. Lester Campbell led the club in the singing of "America". Enjoyable refreshments of cream, wafers, and cake were served during the afternoon, Mrs. Wasley being assisted by Mrs. Jerry Raymond, Mrs. S. W. Youngman, Mrs. Lester Campbell, and Mrs. L. F. Cooling.

Grace Church Missionary

A meeting of the Grace Evangelical Missionary Society will be held at 2:30 p. m. Wednesday at the church. The meeting is held the third instead of the fourth week because of Memorial Day. Plans for the coming year's work are to be made at this meeting, and all members should be present to assist in making them.

WOMEN DOING MEN'S WORK

One of the most striking results of the great war in Europe, is the extent to which women are doing the work of men. Travellers to England and France report that practically every able-bodied man is in uniform and women by the thousands are engaged in doing men's work—acting as conductors and drivers on the car and doing all sorts of heavy work besides.

This shows unexpected possibilities in what has been mistakenly called the weaker sex. Women are subject to ailments which men do not have, and when so ailing become weak, helpless sufferers. But a remedy has been found. For forty years, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been making such women well and strong, and as able to do work as any other woman.

Country Club Picnic

Country Club members are anxiously scanning the weather reports these days, and today are quite cheered up by "Fair and Warmer", the weather quotation for Wednesday, for after two days of gloomy chill weather, surely two fair and warm days are due, so here's hoping that Thursday will be brimming over with brightness and as warm as golfers and picnickers like, and no warmer. For it's to be "All, ho, for the picnic" and the formal club opening, although they do say it's going to be very informal, for what else could a picnic be at the golf links?

In the afternoon there are to be the golf contests and for the less strenuously minded (By the way that word "strenuous" is entirely in the back-ground now and "economical" and "increased food production" are the pet words rolled on every tongue, but, thanks be, no one has yet suggested turning the Country Club grounds into a potato patch) there will be card tables for a social game in the club house. Then at 5:30 comes the flag raising and the golf links are to be cleared and everyone is to come up near the club house for that event.

The club is basking in the generosity of its friends; for hasn't it two flags to raise—one presented last year by M. E. Rice of the Nachusa Tavern and the other this year by James Ballou, another enthusiastic follower of Colonel Bogie? A sturdy flag pole, presented by W. B. Brinton, is already set, and the donor will be one of the principal spokesmen at the raising. Besides the flags, the club was presented a handsome club pennant, in the club colors, green and white, by Rev. J. J. Clancy, Atty. Harry Edwards will also speak at the flag raising.

Now, for the rest of the program. Of course, there's the picnic supper, for whoever heard of a picnic without "eats"? The supper will be served at 6:30, and with that limitation, it is to be waged that neither Col. Brinton nor Atty. Edwards will speak over the half hour and keep the supper waiting. Now, all those who want a cup of hot coffee with the evening meal, must abide with this bit of instruction—Telephone Mrs. Labes on Wednesday—otherwise you don't get it. And there's another small matter—take a nickel along to pay for the coffee, for such is the degree of the higher-ups, as free coffee dispensing is liable to mount up to quite an expense before the season is over. Think back to some raw evening of last year and count up the cups of steaming coffee. Then, too, as another addition to the supper—if it's warm, Mrs. Labes will have ice cream to serve.

After the supper, and even after that long lingering is taboo, the Chamber of Commerce band will play a concert, the hour 7:30, and the evening is open for dancing, card playing, or merely chatting on the veranda as fancy dictates.

The club house will probably look very festive, as members of a committee on decorations are planning to scour the woods for flowers, and as wild crabapple blossoms, violets, and ever so many other kinds, are at the hey-day of loveliness, they are not liable to hunt in vain.

Entertained P. E. O.

Mrs. C. H. Ives of North Dixon entertained the members of Chapter A C. Illinois P. E. O., at the regular meeting of the club Monday afternoon. The regular business of the club was transacted and it was planned to hold the annual picnic of the club on June 4th at Lowell Park. Mrs. W. B. Armstrong gave as a reading Rudyard Kipling's "Eyes of Asia", and was heartily applauded. A majority of the club members were present to enjoy the meeting, which ended in a social hour with refreshments.

Four Delegates to Convention

The ladies of the Grand Army Circle held a regular business meeting Monday evening, making plans for the state convention at Bloomington on the 6th, 7th and 8th of June. As delegates Mrs. Massen, Mrs. Tourtellott, Mrs. Peters, and Mrs. Grimes will be sent to represent the society. Memorial Day plans were also laid.

Guests from Freeport

Miss Florence Dustman entertained over Sunday her mother, Mrs. Dustman, and her sister, Mrs. Snyder, and the latter's little daughter, all of Freeport. The day was spent in Grand Detour at one of the hotels, Mrs. G. L. Adams of this city also accompanied them.

Morning Session

Address—"India": Mrs. Gertrud V. Tweedie. Offering. Benediction.

The Dixon society has decided to attend the Thursday meeting at Polo and those going will include the officers of the M. E. society and as many of the members as find it possible to attend. It is hoped that the delegation from Dixon will be large. Among those who have already signified their intention of attending are Mrs. Wm. Hintz, president; Mrs. Grose, treasurer; Mrs. Morris, secretary; and Mrs. Ware and Mrs. Harned.

The Hol Polloi Club

The Hol Polloi Club members spent a pleasant Monday evening with Mrs. Benj. Shaw, chatting and crocheting, and enjoying the excellent refreshments she served. The weeks at the home of Mrs. Dave Roos.

Methodist W. E. M. S. Convention

The Dixon Methodist Episcopal District Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will meet in convention Wednesday, May 23, at Franklin Grove, and Thursday, May 24th, at Polo. The program for the two days is the same, with the exception of the opening service, as will be noted.

Inter Nos Circle

The Inter Nos Circle will meet Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Ray Cramer, 1217 Seventh street.

K. C. May Party

Elaborate preparations are being made by the committee of the Dixon Council, Knights of Columbus, to make the coming May Party, to be given the evening of May 29th, at Rosbrook hall, the most delightful of the many pleasant affairs the Knights have given. The members of the committee are William Kennedy, Herbert O'Malley, and Paul Reilly. Already 400 invitations have been issued and many responses received, some coming from Clinton, DeKalb and Ohio.

The decorative effect of the hall, as planned, will be particularly beautiful. The ceiling of the hall will be concealed by branches of trees, producing a woodland effect, while the orchestra stand railing will be draped with red, white, and blue bunting, and flags will also be used freely.

The Marquette orchestra, which is to play for the dancing, opens the evening with a concert from 8:30 to 9, when the entire company will form in the line of grand march.

Postpone Meeting

Miss Leivan's section of the M. E. Ladies' Aid will postpone this week's meeting indefinitely.

Current Topics Supper

The members of the Current Topics Club will hold their annual scramble supper this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bryan. Last year's supper, also held at the pleasant Bryan home is still remembered as one of the club's most delightful evenings, but a still more delightful time is anticipated because there is a new host in the person of Orville Kaylor Bryan, the small son of the Bryans. The members take their husbands to these suppers.

Choir Rehearsal

The choir of the Grace Evangelical church is asked to meet at the church at 7:45 this evening for rehearsal.

MANAGEMENT OF THE FOOD PROBLEM IN GREAT BRITAIN.

While the question of food supply had been engaging some attention before the declaration of war came, it came almost suddenly into prominence as attention was given to the condition of food throughout the world and the probabilities of a shortage which might develop in this country. The question of food always becomes of immediate importance to a country entering upon war, because of the draft for the army, diminishing the supply of agricultural producers, and because three men in the army, it is estimated, require the services of one in the food-producing area to keep them alive.

The experiences of Great Britain become of interest and value to us now that we are taking up the effort to conserve, economically distribute and increase production of foodstuffs in the United States. The Department of Commerce has recently issued some notes showing what Great Britain's measures for control of food have been since the beginning of the war. These are furnished by Commercial Attache Pierce C. Williams. A brief statement of the principal undertakings follows:

It was a little over a month after the declaration of war that first action was taken by Great Britain through issuance of a proclamation prohibiting the importation of sugar from any European port. Great Britain had been largely dependent for its supply of beet sugar upon Germany and Austria and the prohibition was designed quite early to prevent trading with the enemy. The government then appointed a Royal Commission on the sugar supply to meet the situation brought about by this curtailment of supplies from Europe. The commission went into the market and bought up large quantities of raw sugar in various parts of the world. Sugar refiners were requested not to buy raw sugar anywhere, but to receive their supply from the Royal Commission at fixed prices. The refiners agreed in their turn to sell their product to the dealers at fixed prices. A little later control was made complete by a proclamation forbidding the importation of sugar from any foreign country without a special license from the Royal Commission.

Two years later, October, 1916, a Royal Commission on wheat was appointed, with full power to take all steps necessary to insure adequate and regular supplies of wheat and flour, and the importation of all grain into the United Kingdom was put under the control of that commission, which is composed very largely of experts in the grain trade.

First the commission made a very large purchase of Australian wheat and took steps to requisition enough ships to carry the wheat to England. This commission has also, through its agents, made large purchases of grain in the United States for the British government.

The first effort toward systematic rationing of the population was made in November last year by the Board of Trade, fixing the maximum price at which milk might be sold wholesale and retail. Then the Board of Trade issued the milling order, fixing according to a certain schedule the percentages of flour that must be extracted from wheat of various qualities, and on Jan. 1, 1917, only flour milled in accordance with the schedule might be used for making bread or any other article of food. Flour mills were required to make periodical returns of stocks of wheat received and flour and offals milled; also a statement of all stocks on hand.

About this time the Board of Trade was given full power to establish regulations for the following purposes:

1. Prevent the waste or unnecessary destruction of any specified article.
2. Restrict and prescribe the use of any article.
3. Regulate the manufacture and production of articles so that the public may be supplied with those articles "in the form most suitable in the circumstances."
4. Direct the mode of sale and distribution of articles.
5. Regulate "the market operations" in an article "with a view to preventing an unreasonable inflation of the price."
6. Prevent the sale of an article at a price exceeding an amount named.
7. Require the owners of stocks of articles to place them at the disposal of the Board on terms to be determined by arbitration in default of agreement.
8. Compel a detailed return to be made of available supplies.
9. Enter premises where articles are "kept, stored, manufactured, or produced," and examine the stock and test the accuracy of any return that may have been made.

At this time a food controller was appointed. Food was then about 75 per cent. higher than at the beginning of the war. The first restrictive act was directed against meals served in fashionable restaurants in London, limiting to three courses any meal that was served in a public restaurant between the hours of 6 and 9:30 p. m., and two courses for meals served at any other time.

Measures were taken to increase domestic production of foodstuffs, by which the Board of Agriculture had power to enter upon any idle land and cultivate it with or without the owner's consent. All of the idle land in the Kingdom was surveyed and local governing bodies given power to require its cultivation in such manner as best to conserve the nation's interests. Prices were also fixed at which the government would buy the farmers' produce. There are 27,000,000 acres of agricultural land in England and Wales, of which more than 18,000,000 are used for grazing and less than one-fifth for raising cereal crops. The Board of Agriculture has determined that as much of this grazing land as is available shall be plowed up and planted in grain crops.

As with us, the question of labor is the serious element in increasing home production of food. In England, the men most capable of doing such work are nearly all in the army. In addition to perhaps 100,000 women who are now working on the land, German prisoners of war and interned aliens have been put to work cultivating the soil and some 15,000 skilled plowmen have been brought back from the front and loaned temporarily to the Board of Agriculture, which has power to obtain motor plows and tractors and other farming machinery. It is said much plowing is being done at night.

Mills were averaging 76 per cent. of flour from wheat under the order of Jan. 1, 1917. On the 12th of that month millers were required to add a further percentage of not less than 5 per cent., and if this could not be gotten from wheat flour, they were obliged to mix it with flour from barley, corn, rice and oats.

Then with an idea that there might be some hoarding of foodstuffs—people were buying more than they needed for their immediate requirements—it was made a penal offense for any consumer to possess more than a fortnight's supply at any one time, and a retailer might be punished by imprisonment for selling more than a fortnight's supply to any one customer.

From the 1st of February the use of sugar was restricted, and no manufacturer is now allowed to use for confectionery or chocolate more than 50 per cent. of the sugar so used by him in 1915. Certain classes of confectionery were practically prohibited.

The first attempt at individual rationing was made on February 5th, 1917, by an appeal to the public to limit its consumption of bread, meat and sugar. This rationing is as yet purely voluntary, but it is expected that the patriotic effort of each consumer will bring about the saving of more than 1,000,000 tons per annum of bread, meat and sugar.

On Feb. 23, 1917, a number of the most famous London clubs voluntarily instituted one meatless day per week.

On March 17th, a voluntary agreement with the importers and distributors of tea was made, fixing the retail price at 53 cents per pound. (2s., 2d.) Arrangements have also been made with the coffee trade to sell at retail a good, sound, pure coffee at the rate of 37 cents per pound (1s., 6d.)

circular and tiny "browns," level as a floor with tiers of terraces at the back, against which one must "carom" frequently for the cup (if caught below the down terraces on the lower and opposite side), you are a very busy golfer.

It is difficult to speak the most treacherous or most attractive green. The "Chinaman's Grave Yard" presents a tee placed a sheer 150 feet above an ancient Chinese burial ground, which is out of bounds and must be driven over to a "brown" skirted by jungle trees, just beyond which lies a lake. It is most satisfying to stand on the pinnacle to watch a well directed shot drop, drop, drop toward that little cup, but oh, the agony of seeing the ball punish the slightest fault by bumping down the rocks into the "Chinaman's Grave Yard," zig-zagging crazily about, now bounding high in the air from a boulder or darting at right angles in a carom off the side of a tomb.

"Spoil Kopje" presents a loft, from the base of a boulder studded hill to a "brown" beyond the opposite base, a difficult and deceptive proposition to a level country player, but great fun, since one loses sight of the ball when carrying a peak and merely can guess at what will be seen when reaching it.

"The Jungle" has a teeing-ground at the end of a rocky decline, through a narrow lane cut from the jungle. The ball must be lofted and driven with the utmost precision here. A slice or a pull of even moderate degree bespeaks a ball devoured by the jungle, and how those black Hindu caddies seem to love to squeak "jungle, jungle," back at one so unfortunate. These caddies, by the way, are most proficient, and it is well for the stranger to accept their judgment in clubs. Four annas (8 cents) per round pay for the caddie and club boy, at which salary they clamor so for work as to embarrass one. At Poona they are held in leash by a master wielding a whip vigorously around their bare legs to drive them back to an established line. They "salaam" to the white sahib with a gala salute on the prospect of a round. Toward the end of a round I remarked to a companion, "This black boy of mine can play golf. He knows more about the game than I, from his advice." So we asked them to drive. Rama selected a brassie with much care, carefully teed and after shifting his bare feet about to a satisfactory stance gave a graceful exhibition of perfect driving that would credit a Vardon. A club member told us later that several of the caddies with discarded iron heads, rigged with bamboo handles, would play 18 holes in the seventies, and from the form displayed to us, I believe it.

Mahabeshwar signifies "The Hill of the Foxes," and is a dense jungle inhabited by monkeys, fox, jackal, eagles, etc., while each season sees pet dogs carried from bungalows by leopards or panthers. Tigers have been shot here. The rainfall is 300 inches per year and no white man can live here during the monsoon, but in the dry season the climate is delightful and Europeans seeking the cool, thin air of the high elevation after the humidity of the sea shore, promote the enterprise.

Grass is subdued by employing native women who cover the vast acreage on their haunches, clipping the grass with small sickles or plucking it by hand. For this they receive from 5 to 7 cents per day. It would not be justice to neglect to mention the "Punch Bowl," a name much used, but never so appropriately. The test is to drive to the very center of a deep gully, circular and fringed all about with jungle trees from a tee 150 yards distant. Some may attempt a long drive to carom back from the far side; others attempt with irons to drop gently over the near crest while till more loft high for the center of the bowl and trust to the fortunes of war.

The lanes leading to Mahabeshwar are lined with the most beautiful hedges of roses which have every appearance of being the most exquisite Teas, yet they are uncultivated. The forest trees are of great beauty and numerous waterfalls add to the beauty of the surroundings.

For a "sporty" dangerous course; for beauty of surroundings; for historic interest, or for perfect golfing weather I cannot conceive of anything to surpass this remote and little known spot.

ATLANTA HIT BY 5 MILLION FIRE

catching on nearby buildings, began to get away from the fighters. On Edgewood avenue it jumped across the street to sun dried roofs of cottages. Every shingle that caught a spark burst into flames. The fire spread northward and eastward aided by a high wind.

Flames Deceive Firemen.

The firemen were also hampered by an odd trick of fate. The flames leaped over the houses on the edge of blocks and caught houses in the middle. This made the firemen's work most difficult and helped the spread of flames. Reaching northward, the flames swept out Hilliard and Houston streets, licking their way through negro dwellings toward the neighborhoods where more substantial residences stood.

A path two blocks wide was cut across Auburn avenue and onward it swept, travelling rapidly toward Irwin street. There is was checked but only temporarily. It quickly leaped across the intervening space into another block and came on unchecked north upon Houston street.

Trees, telephone poles, fences and everything in the path of the flames began to go.

The residence of W. F. Slaton, brother of the former governor was among those in the path of the flames.

Germans on Ellis Island Have Everything but Freedom.

WELL FED, HOUSED NICELY

Some Would Like More Room and to Be Kept Busy—They Get Excellent Meals, Officers and Crews Faring Alike—Many Books For Them to Read.

Through the courtesy of Commissioner General of Immigration Anthony A. Caminetti and Frederic C. Howe, the New York immigration commissioner, a reporter was permitted to get first hand facts on the way the German sailors taken from their ships are being treated at Ellis Island. He writes:

"Ellis Island is an armed camp. An armed guard of infantrymen is stretched about the island, giving it the appearance of a military reservation. The second thing that attracts one who was accustomed to the island in peace times is an array of searchlights strung on each tower and at all the upper windows of every building, including the hospital. Every blade of grass on the island can be illuminated by the pressing of a button.

"The Germans, officers and men, of whom there are exactly 1,100—the women and children from the ships having been permitted to leave there—are housed in what is called the baggage and dormitory building. It is an H shaped brick building on the north side of the island. On the first floor are the baggage rooms for immigrants, on the second floor detention rooms and on the third floor dormitories. The Germans occupy only the two upper floors, although some of their trunks are stored on the ground floor.

Officers at Second Table.

"When the reporter entered the building the German officers were marching from the lounging rooms to the dining room, which is on the second floor of the southwest section of the building. The men of the crews had finished their noonday meal. There was not room to feed all at once, and the officers were given their choice of hours for meals. They chose a second table. It was a choice of a later breakfast and dinner at a later hour, rather than a sidestep in favor of the men.

"The messroom has a white tiled floor, and there are ten long tables, some of which are surrounded with chairs and some with benches. The men were permitted to select their own tables and their own seats. One table at the officers' mess is occupied almost entirely by captains. Other masters chose to sit with the officers under them on their ships.

"Both the officers and men have the same food. There is no distinction of rank made in this. They also have the same food that the government officials on the island eat. At dinner while the reporter was present they had soup, fresh codfish, potatoes, bread and butter, pudding and coffee. It was well cooked food, and there was plenty of it. The men all ate with a relish and chatted freely during the meal.

Many Bald Heads.

"As they filed in it was noticeable that many of them were tall and slight and as many more short and stocky. One is impressed by the long and short of them. There seems to be no happy medium to their size; also as the officers sat at the table the number of bald heads was noticeable. Baldness among seafaring men of most nationalities is almost rare, but a German officer of a ship lives under a heavy cap.

"Blonds also predominate among the men. They are a healthy looking and appearing lot, and most of them have grown fat in their confinement. The members of the crews are better fed than they were on board ship.

"In one of the detention rooms on the second floor, which might better be called lounging rooms, the hand baggage of the men is racked and in another that of the officers. The officers have their own rooms and the men others. In this lounging room for the officers hang several birdcages with canaries brought from the ships, and on one side is a large cage, the abode of a parrot from one of the ships at Hoboken. The door of the cage is left open at all hours, and the parrot rules the roost. It can swear in German with any mate and squawk over all the human voices in the place.

"There are several framed pictures on the pillars of this room. One in the center is a photograph of Captain Lieutenant Otto Weddigen, with the inscription, 'Commandant of the U-9 and U-29.' The picture is two feet high. There is also a picture of Bismarck, and several illustrations cut from magazines are pasted about.

"In these lounging rooms the men sit about tables and read magazines and books that have been provided for them. play chess, checkers and cards and join in endless talks among themselves. Most of the officers smoke.

"The only real criticism of the housing of the Germans on the island could be the small quarters afforded there. The best has been done for them that could be with the facilities available, but the men would rather be sent to some detention camp where they would have more room and could be occupied in various ways."

A Lost Range of Mountains.

A great range of mountains once extended from the eastern end of Lake Superior southwest to beyond the Mississippi river. In places they were a mile high. Weather and volcanic action wore them down, the sea covered them and today they are prairie.

Put a Stick in the Knot.

When tying a knot in rope which must stand much strain put a stick of soft wood in the knot for it to close on. When you want to untie the knot break the stick and pull out both ends. Your knot can be easily untied, according to Farm and Fireside.

Early Diplomats to Turkey.

Some of the early diplomats accredited to Constantinople had unpleasant experiences even in times of peace. In 1673 the grand vizier, having intercepted some French dispatches, tried to borrow the cipher of the embassy. Delahaye, the first secretary, who refused to accede to this request, was thrown into prison, where he was bastinadoed and all his teeth were broken. Louis XIV. was then at the height of his power, yet no reprisals were made for this treatment of his representative. Until the middle of the eighteenth century the foreign envoys in Constantinople were under close supervision. They were forbidden to visit one another's houses or to meet elsewhere.

Nails and Screws.

A nail not driven entirely in and which has become so rusted that it cannot be withdrawn without breaking a hammer handle will come out easily if it is struck a smart blow first. The same holds true with a screw. If it will not turn out try turning it in first. These suggestions may not always work, but many times the trouble may be overcome by their use.—Popular Science Monthly.

Short Sermons.

Bishop Sanford Olmsted of Denver is noted for the brevity of his sermons. Congratulated at a tea on his happy quality of being brief, Bishop Olmsted smiled and said:

"One of my first pulpit discoveries was that you can't make a sermon immortal by making it everlasting."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Kazan, the wild sledge dog, one-quarter wolf and three-quarter husky, distrustful of all men because of their brutal treatment of him, learns to love his master's wife when she is kind to him in new and strange surroundings.

CHAPTER II—He shows snarling enmity to McCready, who is to accompany Thorpe and his wife to the Red River camp.

CHAPTER III—Kazan knows that McCready is a murderer. McCready stealthily caresses Isobel's hair and Kazan attacks him. Thorpe whips Kazan. McCready tries to murder Thorpe and attacks Isobel. Kazan kills him and then, fearing the club in punishment, runs away into the forest.

CHAPTER IV—Torn between love of his mistress, the fear of his master's club and the desires of the wolf nature in him, he at length sends forth the wolf cry.

CHAPTER V—Kazan runs with the wolves, fights their leader, becomes master of the pack, and mates with Gray Wolf.

CHAPTER VI—Kazan and the pack attack Pierre Radisson, his daughter Joan and her baby, but in the battle Kazan turns dog again and helps drive off the wolves.

CHAPTER VII—Kazan's wounds are dressed and he is tied to the sledge.

CHAPTER VIII—Pierre and Kazan drag the sledge. Gray Wolf follows at a distance. Pierre dies, 40 miles away from their home on the Little Beaver.

CHAPTER IX—Out of a blizzard Kazan drags the sledge with Joan and the baby on it to safety and then goes back to Gray Wolf. He spends the long winter hovering between the lure of Joan and the baby and Gray Wolf.

CHAPTER X—In their den on the top of Sun Rock puppies come to Gray Wolf and Kazan in the spring.

CHAPTER XI—A lynx kills the puppies and blinds Gray Wolf. Kazan kills the lynx. Joan and her husband go away to the South. Kazan stays with Gray Wolf.

CHAPTER XII—Kazan and Gray Wolf travel. He is eyes to her and she is ears and nose to him.

CHAPTER XIII—Paul Weyman, scientist, and Henri Lott, trapper, capture and imprison Kazan and Gray Wolf. Weyman is permitted by Kazan to pet him, but Gray Wolf strikes and goes on a hunger strike. Weyman quietly releases them in the dead of night.

CHAPTER XIV—Sandy McTriggar shoots Kazan and discovers from the collar on the neck that it is a dog and not a wolf that he has wounded.

CHAPTER XV—Sandy muzzles Kazan while he is unconscious and afterwards clubs and tortures the dog into sullen submission. They travel to Red Gold City and Sandy matches Kazan against a Great Dane for a finish fight.

CHAPTER XVI.

Professor McGill.

Red Gold City was ripe for a night of relaxation. There had been some gambling, a few fights and enough liquor to create excitement now and then, but the presence of the mounted police had served to keep things unusually tame compared with events a few hundred miles further north, in the Dawson country. The entertainment proposed by Sandy McTriggar and Jan Harker met with excited favor. The news spread for twenty miles about Red Gold City and there had never been greater excitement in the town than on the afternoon and night of the big fight. This was largely because Kazan and the huge Dane had been placed on exhibition, each dog in a specially made cage of his own, and a fever of betting began. Three hundred men, each of whom was paying five dollars to see the battle, viewed the gladiators through the bars of their cages. Harker's dog was a combination of Great Dane and mastiff, born in the north, and bred to the traces. Betting favored him by the odds of two to one. Occasionally it ran three to one. At these odds there was plenty of Kazan money. Those who were risking their money on him were the older wilderness men—men who had spent their lives among dogs, and who knew what the red light in Kazan's eyes meant. An old Kootenay miner spoke low in another's ear:

"I'd bet on 'im even. I'd give odds if I had to. He'll fight all around the Dane. The Dane won't have no method."

"But he's got the weight," said the other dubiously. "Look at his jaws, an' his shoulders—"

"An' his big feet, an' his soft throat, an' the clumsy thickness of his belly," interrupted the Kootenay man. "For heaven's sake, man, take my word for it, an' don't put your money on the Dane!"

Others thrust themselves between them. At first Kazan had snarled at all these faces about him. But now he lay back against the boarded side of the cage and eyed them sullenly from between his forepaws.

The fight was to be pulled off in Harker's place, a combination of saloon and cafe. The benches and tables had been cleared out and in the center of the one big room a cage ten feet square rested on a platform three and a half feet from the floor. Seats for the three hundred spectators were drawn closely around this. Suspended just above the open top of the cage were two big oil lamps with glass reflectors.

It was eight o'clock when Harker, McTriggar and two other men bore Kazan to the arena by means of the wooden bars that projected from the bottom of his cage. The big Dane was already in the fighting cage. He stood blinking his eyes in the brilliant light of the reflecting lamps. He pricked up his ears when he saw Kazan. Kazan did not show his fangs. Neither revealed the expected animosity. It was the first they had seen of each other, and a murmur or disappointment swept the ranks of the three hundred men. The Dane remained as motionless as a rock when Kazan was prodded from his own cage into the fighting cage. He did not leap or snarl. He regarded Kazan with a dubious questioning poise to his splendid head, and then looked again to the expectant and excited faces of the waiting men. For a few moments Kazan stood stiff-legged, facing the Dane. Then his shoulders dropped, and he, too, coolly faced the crowd that had expected a fight to the death. A laugh of derision swept through the closely seated rows. Catcalls, jeering, taunts flung at McTriggar and Harker, and angry voices demanding their money back mingled with a tumult of growing discontent. Sandy's face was red with mortification and rage. The blue veins in Harker's forehead had swollen twice their normal size. He shook his fist in the face of the crowd, and shouted:

"Wait! Give 'em a chance, you fools!"

At his words every voice was stifled. Kazan had turned. He was facing the Dane. The Dane had turned his eyes to Kazan. Cautiously, prepared for a lunge or a sidestep, Kazan advanced a little. The Dane's shoulders bristled. He, too, advanced upon Kazan. Four feet apart they stood rigid. One could have heard a whisper in the room now. Sandy and Harker, standing close to the cage, scarcely breathed. Splendid in every limb and muscle, warriors of a hundred fights, and fearless to the point of death, the two half-wolf victims of man stood facing each other. None could see the questioning look in their brute eyes. None knew that in this thrilling moment the unseen hand of the wonderful Spirit God of the wilderness hovered between them, and that one of its miracles was descending upon them. It was understanding. Meeting in the open—rivals in the traces—they would have been rolling in the throes of terrible battle. But here came that mute appeal of brotherhood. In the final moment, when only a step separated them, and when men expected to see the first mad lunge, the splendid Dane slowly raised his head and looked over Kazan's back through the glare of the lights. Harker trembled, and under his breath he cursed. The Dane's throat was open to Kazan. But between the beasts had passed the voiceless pledge of peace. Kazan did not leap. He turned. And shoulder to shoulder—splendid in their contempt of man—they stood and looked through the bars of their prison into the one of human faces.

A roar burst from the crowd—a roar of anger, of demand, of threat. In his rage Harker drew a revolver and leveled it at the Dane. Above the tumult of the crowd a single voice stopped him.

"Hold!" it demanded. "Hold—in the name of the law!"

For a moment there was silence. Every face turned in the direction of the voice. Two men stood on chairs behind the last row. One was Sergeant Brokaw of the Royal Northwest Mounted. It was he who had spoken. He was holding up a hand, commanding silence and attention. On the chair beside him stood another man. He was thin, with drooping shoulders, and a pale smooth face—a little man, whose physique and hollow cheeks told nothing of the years he had spent close up along the raw edge of the Arctic. It was he who spoke now, while the sergeant held up his hand. His voice was low and quiet:

"I'll give the owners five hundred dollars for those dogs," he said.

Every man in the room heard the offer. Harker looked at Sandy. For an instant their heads were close together.

"They won't fight, and they'll make good team-mates," the little man went on. "I'll give the owners five hundred dollars."

Harker raised a hand. "Make it six," he said. "Make it six and they're yours."

The little man hesitated. Then he nodded. "I'll give you six hundred," he agreed.

Murmurs of discontent rose throughout the crowd. Harker climbed to the edge of the platform.

"We ain't to blame because they wouldn't fight," he shouted, "but if there's any of you small enough to want your money back you can git it as you go out. The dogs laid down on us, that's all. We ain't to blame."

The little man was edging his way between the chairs, accompanied by the sergeant of police. With his pale face close to the sapling bars of the cage he looked at Kazan and the big Dane.

"I guess we'll be good friends," he said, and he spoke so low that only the dogs heard his voice. "It's a big price, but we'll charge it to the Smithsonian, lads. I'm going to need a couple of four-footed friends of your moral caliber."

And no one knew why Kazan and the Dane drew nearer to the little scientist's side of the cage as he pulled out a big roll of bills and counted out six hundred dollars for Harker and Sandy McTriggar.

CHAPTER XVII.

Alone in Darkness.

Never had the terror and loneliness

of blindness fallen upon Gray Wolf as in the days that followed the shooting of Kazan and his capture by Sandy McTriggar. For hours after the shot she crouched in the bush back from the river, waiting for him to come to her. She had faith that he would come, as he had come a thousand times before, and she lay close on her belly, sniffing the air, and whining when it brought no scent of her mate.

She Had Faith That He Would Come.

Day and night were alike an endless chaos of darkness to her now, but she knew when the sun went down. She sensed the first deepening shadows of evening, and she knew that the stars were out, and that the river lay in moonlight. It was a night to roam, and after a time she moved restlessly about in a small circle on the plain, and sent out her first inquiring call for Kazan. Up from the river came the pungent odor of smoke, and instinctively she knew that it was this smoke, and the nearness of man, that was keeping Kazan from her. But she went no nearer than that first circle made by her padded feet. Blindness had taught her to wait. Since the day of the battle on the Sun Rock, when the lynx had destroyed her eyes, Kazan had never failed her. Three times she called for him in the early night. Then she made herself a nest under a banksian shrub, and waited until dawn.

Just how she knew when night blotted out the last glow of the sun, so without seeing she knew when day came. Not until she felt the warmth of the sun on her back did her anxiety overcome her caution. Slowly she moved toward the river, sniffing the air and whining. There was no longer the smell of smoke in the air, and she could not catch the scent of man. She followed her own trail back to the sand-bar, and in the fringe of thick bush overhanging the white shore of the stream she stopped and listened. After a little she scrambled down and went straight to the spot where she and Kazan were drinking when the shot came. And there her nose struck the sand still wet and thick with Kazan's blood.

She knew it was the blood of her mate, for the scent of him was all about her in the sand, mingled with the man-smell of Sandy McTriggar. She sniffed the trail of his body to the edge of the stream, where Sandy had dragged him to the canoe. She found the fallen tree to which he had been tied. And then she came upon one of the two clubs that Sandy had used to beat wounded Kazan into submission. It was covered with blood and hair, and all at once Gray Wolf lay back on her haunches and turned her blind face to the sky, and there rose from her throat a cry for Kazan that drifted for miles on the wings of the south wind. Never had Gray Wolf given quite that cry before. It was not the "call" that comes with the moonlit nights, and neither was it the hungry, nor the she-wolf's yearning for matehood. It carried with it the lament of death. And after that one cry Gray Wolf slunk back to the fringe of brush over the river, and lay with her face turned to the stream.

A strange terror fell upon her. She had grown accustomed to darkness, but never before had she been alone in that darkness. Always there had been the guardianship of Kazan's presence. She heard the clucking sound of a spruce hen in the bush a few yards away, and now that sound came to her as if from out of another world. A ground-mouse rustled through the grass close to her forepaws, and she snapped at it, and closed her teeth on a rock. The muscles of her shoulders twitched tremulously and she shivered as if stricken by intense cold. She was terrified by the darkness that shut out the world from her, and she pined at her closed eyes, as if she might open them to light.

Early in the afternoon she wandered back on the plain. It was different. It frightened her, and soon she returned to the beach, and snuggled down under the tree where Kazan had lain. She was not so frightened here. The smell of Kazan was strong about her. For an hour she lay motionless, with her head resting on the club cloaked with his hair and blood. Night found her still there. And when the moon and the stars came out she crawled back into the pit in the white sand that Kazan's body had made under the tree.

With dawn she went down to the edge of the stream to drink. She could not see that the day was almost as dark as night, and that the gray-black sky was a chaos of slumbering storm. But she could smell the presence of it in the thick air, and could feel the forked flashes of lightning that rolled up with the dense pall from the south and west. The distant rumbling of thunder grew louder, and she huddled herself again under the tree. For hours the storm crashed over her, and the rain fell in a deluge. When it had finished she slunk out from her shelter like a thing beaten. Vainly she sought for one last scent of Kazan. The club was washed clean. Again the sand was white where Kazan's blood had reddened it. Even under the tree there was no sign of him left.

Until now only the terror of being alone in the pit of darkness that enveloped her had oppressed Gray Wolf. With afternoon came hunger. It was this hunger that drew her from the sand-bar, and she wandered back into the plain. A dozen times she scented game, and each time it evaded her. Even a ground-mouse that she cornered under a root, and dug out with her paws, escaped her fangs.

Thirty-six hours before this Kazan and Gray Wolf had left a half of their last kill a mile or two farther back on the plain. The kill was one of the big brown rabbits, and Gray Wolf turned in its direction. She did not require sight to find it. In her was developed to its finest point that sixth sense of the animal kingdom, the sense of orientation, and as straight as a pigeon might have winged its flight she cut through the bush to the spot where they had cached the rabbit. A white fox had been there ahead of her, and she found only scattered bits of hair and fur. What the fox had left the moose birds and bush jays had carried away. Hungrily Gray Wolf turned back to the river.

That night she slept again where Kazan had lain, and three times she called for him without answer. A heavy dew fell, and it drenched the last vestige of her mate's scent out of the sand. But still through the day that followed, and the day that followed that, blind Gray Wolf clung to the narrow rim of white sand. On the fourth day her hunger reached a point where she gnawed the bark from willow bushes. It was on this day that she made a discovery. She was drinking, when her sensitive nose touched something in the water's edge that was smooth, and bore a faint odor of flesh. It was one of the big northern river clams. She pawed it ashore, sniffing at the hard shell. Then she crunched it between her teeth. She had never tasted sweeter meat than that which she found inside, and she began hunting for other clams. She found many of them, and ate until she was no longer hungry. For three days more she remained on the bar.

And then, one night, the call came to her. It set her quivering with a strange new excitement—something that may have been a new hope, and in the moonlight she trotted nervously up and down the shining strip of sand, facing now the north, and now the south, and then the east and the west—her head hung up, listening, as if in the soft wind of the night she was trying to locate the whispering lure of a wonderful voice. And whatever it was that came to her came from out of the south and east. Off there—across the barren, far beyond the outer edge of the northern timber line—was home. And off there, in her brute way, she reasoned that she must find Kazan.

The call did not come from their old windfall home in the swamp. It came from beyond that, and in a flashing vision there rose through her blindness a picture of the towering Sun Rock, of the winding trail that led to it, and the cabin on the plain. It was there that blindness had come to her. It was there that day had ended, and eternal night had begun. And it was there that she had mothered her first-born. Nature had registered these things so that they could never be wiped out of her memory, and when the call came it was from the sunlit world where she had last known light and life and had last seen the moon and the stars in the blue night of the skies.

And to that call she responded, leaving the river and its food behind her—straight out into the face of darkness and starvation, no longer fearing death or the emptiness of the world she could not see; for ahead of her, two hundred miles away, she could see the Sun Rock, the winding trail, the nest of her first-born between the two big rocks—and Kazan!

One Dose of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy Drives Them Out—Ends Torture.

Stomach poisons breed millions of germs that eat into your vitals, causing Gas Pressure, Indigestion, Constipation, Torpid Liver, Auto-Intoxication, Yellow Jaundice, Gall Stones, Appendicitis, Cancer and Ulcers of the Stomach and Intestines, etc., etc. Thousands of sufferers have been restored by Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, among them Justice of the Supreme Court, Congressmen, Doctors, Lawyers, Bankers, Ministers, Nurses, Farmers, Mechanics—persons of every class—probably your own neighbors. Stomach troubles are due mostly to catarrhal poison. Mayr's Wonderful Remedy removes that poison, thoroughly cleanses the system, drives out the disease breeding germs, always inflammation and ends suffering. Unlike any other remedy. No alcohol—nothing to injure you. One dose convinces. FREE book on Stomach Affirmations. Write Geo. H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, Chicago, or obtain a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy from any reliable druggist, who will return your money if it fails.

MASSACRE OF JEWS FEARED

Action of Turk Authorities Causing Apprehension in Palestine.

Stockholm, May 22.—Telegrams from the Jewish societies in Palestine received by the secretariat department of the socialist conference here say a fresh massacre of Palestine Jews, resembling the Armenian massacres, is threatened, and appeals are made to the socialists of all countries.

The messages say the Turkish government has given orders for the evacuation of Palestine by the Jewish population and that the execution of these measures are being carried out with increasing severity. The orders, it is said, are aimed at the Jews in Judea and Jerusalem and later in Galilee.

Short Wheat Crop for Sweden.
Stockholm, May 22.—A state census on the condition of winter wheat and rye on April 30 in all the Swedish provinces shows prospects of less than a middling crop everywhere, except in the Province of Blekinge, where there will be an average crop. The census shows a wheat area of 7.3 per cent less than in 1916, and the rye area 8.2 less.

Registration Hours 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. Washington, May 22.—A mistake in some of the mimeographed copies of the President's proclamation regarding registration for the new army was corrected by the war department. The hours of registration are from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m., not 7 to 7.

As to the Fireplace.

The sides of a fireplace should be well splayed or beveled in order to reflect the heat. The back should lean forward at the top for the same purpose, and the fireplace should not be too deep. A projecting chimney produces an effect of pushing the guest away, whereas a receding one beckons him nearer to enjoy the hospitality of the open fire. For this reason the inglenook—that is, the fireplace built into the wall of the room—is especially cozy and attractive.

DO YOUR SHARE.

Are you doing your share in the cause of humanity? The world's progress is caused not only by the mighty pushes of its heroes, but also by the aggregate of the tiny pushes of each honest worker, and every man who refuses to push because his effort would be so small is making a foolish mistake.

LOOKING UP ILLINOIS CANTONMENT SITES

Col. Edwin Root Starts with Big Springfield Offer.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., May 22.

Personal inspection of proffered sites for the Illinois cantonment of the new national conscription army was begun by Colonel Edwin Root, chairman of the board of location. Colonel Root and Adjutant General Dickson were taken over a tract north of Springfield by Representatives of the Commercial association.

Colonel Root gave no indication of his opinion of the site which consists of 2,731 acres—281 acres more than the war department specifications require. It lies four and one half miles from the capital, fronting three miles on the Sangamon river, and extending a mile and a quarter back.

One quarter of a mile away are the Springfield water works, the proximity of which offers one of the chief arguments in favor of the site. The government is insistent upon a full supply of pure water and connections easily could be made.

SOLONS' WORK IS CUT OUT

Illinois General Assembly Has Large Job Ahead for Week.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., May 22.

Here are just a few of the many things on the program for this week in the fiftieth general assembly, which is getting ready to adjourn on June 16:

Battle over the private bank bill in the house. Meetings of the conferees on the $60,000,000 hard road bond issue bill. Meetings of the house and senate committees on the Chicago traction measures. Meetings of the conferees on the state civil service bill. Renewal of the effort to pass the loan shark bill in the house, hearing by the senate license committee on the house boxing bill. Passage of important appropriation bills. Fight in the senate to pass the anti-injunction bill and send it to the house, where it was defeated.

CONDITION OF CROPS IMPROVED BY RAINS

Ideal Weather Helps Winter Wheat; West Is Aided.

Chicago, May 22.—Crop conditions are highly favorable. Winter wheat has experienced ideal weather for the past two or three weeks and the heavy rains which fell over Sunday was just what the plant needed to carry it through to maturity. In Kansas, the crop is heading and the moisture will insure good heads as well as a plump berry.

The northwest was getting dry and the relief afforded the spring wheat plant by the rains will start the new crop in a most favorable manner. The movement of wheat is still of fair volume and local arrivals are estimated at 75 cars. Northwest wheat receipts were 515 cars, compared with 420 cars last year. Winnipeg received 79 cars, compared with 1,291 cars last year. Arrivals in the Canadian market of late compare favorably with the record breaking movement of last year.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 40,000 bu. for two days. World's shipments last week were 7,865,000 bu., compared with 12,676,000 bu. last year. Australia shipped 1,120,000 bu. last week, which indicates that an effort is being made to move the surplus in that country to consumptive channels. Liverpool spot wheat was dull.

Former Kansas Senator Dead.

Leavenworth, Kan., May 22.—Former United States Senator Alexander Caldwell, eighty-seven years old, is dead at Kansas City. He was a veteran of the Mexican war. He came to Kansas in 1861. He was elected senator from Kansas in 1871 and resigned two years later. He was the president of the First National bank until his health failed two years ago.

Urges Farmers to Buy Liberty Bonds.

Des Moines, May 22.—To the American farmer who, notwithstanding high prices for his products, has so far subscribed proportionately little to the $2,000,000,000 liberty loan, Secretary of the Treasury W. G. McAdoo, here, appealed to show patriotism and "buy a bond."

Gives O. K. to Wilson Shipping Bill.

Washington, May 22.—Favorable report on the administration bill to give the President broad powers as to preferential shipments of food, munitions and other war traffic was made to the house.

Forest Fire Near Duluth.

Duluth, May 22.—A big fire is going through the country west of Rice Lake, ten miles out of Duluth. A high wind has blown for twenty-four hours. Fires are burning near Chisholm.

Mrs. Mooney on Trial.

San Francisco, May 22.—Mrs. Rena Mooney went on trial for murder in connection with a bomb explosion here last July, in which ten persons were killed in the course of a preparedness parade.
